ALLEN & GINTER BRANCH,

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT. SUBJECT: Rebuilding the Temple.—Ezra III. 10 to iv. 5.
GOLDEN TEXT: "The temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."—

By REV. J. E. GILBERT, D. D., Secretary American Society of Religious Education.

CONTEXT.—Last lesson give an account of the proclamation of Cyriss and the pregnantion of the Jew to retain the pregnantion of the Jew to receive the Jew to the Jew formal beginning. Zerubbade, the sweener (flag. 11:2), assembled the priests and Levites, who gathered about the trenches to witness the laying of the foundation.

PRAISING (verses 10 and 11).—That was a glad hour. Prophecies were to be fulfilled and hopes revived. A people, long in bondage, brought back to their native land, deprived of all things except their religion, yet cherishing memories of God's favor in the centuries gone by, were now to begin, by grace of the ruling monarch, a new career. It was eminently propor that there should be public experssions of joy. Appointments had been made to that end. Arranged in order were the priests, clad in their holy garments, bearing trumpets 1 Chr. xvi:5, 6), and the sons of Assaph with symbals, forming an immense choir after the style of David and Solomon in the old temple. If Chr. vi:2). They broke forth the song pruise to God, rendered in parts, the different sections of the choir responding to each other. That glad refrain, "Because He is good, for His mercy endurch forever" (Psalm exxxvi. i), echoed and re-echoed through the city, expressing the sentiment of every heart. SHOUTING (verse II).—The singing was formal and official as much zo as the appointed myusical renderings in curreless. However appropriate, it falled to express all that was in the heart Cermonials have their proper places, but at times they seem cold and unworthy, and then the simotional nature seeks its own method of expression, without restraint of rule or regulation of leader. So it came to pass in Jerusalem when the foundations of the temple were being laid. The trumpets of the press and the symbals of the Levites awakened in the heart could not be confined in the hearts of the people who were assembled. WEEPING (verses 12 and 13).—All this rejoleing was occasioned by a look into the future. The building of the temple was laid.

WEEPING (verses 12 and 13).—All this rejoleing was occasioned by a look in the heart of the press and shouted. But others looked backward. The old men. crowned i
